An invitation to apply for membership of ADRA...

ADRA was established in 1987 to link practitioners, academics, students, administrators and others with an interest in the diverse field of alternative dispute resolution.

ADRA supports ADR professionals through:

- continuing education for practitioners and students
- conferences and seminars
- promoting writing and research on ADR
- access to information and networking
- representations to government, courts and regulators
- regular newsletters

The 1998 ADRA Seminar Series is designed to appeal to the broad spectrum of practitioners and others interested in alternative dispute resolution. Members have the opportunity to network while hearing interesting speakers on a diverse range of ADR topics.

1998 ADRA SEMINAR SERIES

A fascinating presentation by founding ADRA member, Ruth Charlton, on Farm Debt Mediation, launched the 1998 ADRA Seminar Series. The seminar was the first in a series of nine 'lunch time' talks by a range of speakers scheduled for this year. The topics cover a range of issues of interest to alternative dispute resolution practitioners, academics, students and others interested in ADR.

ADRA has produced a brochure detailing the speakers and topics for the 1998 Seminar Series. The brochure also includes an outline of other training and development activities in ADRA's 1998 program of events.

Amongst the professional development opportunities included in ADRA's program is a Fishbowl Exercise on Environmental Mediation to be held in May. In June, Micheline Dewdney will draw on her wealth of experience to present a workshop on Facilitation and Large Scale Disputes.

ADRA has endeavoured to provide a range of networking and educational opportunities for members since its establishment in 1987. The 1998 program is the most comprehensive yet offered, and has been designed in response to interests expressed by members.

Copies of the brochure, as well as further information about the 1998 ADRA Seminar Series can be obtained by writing to ADRA at PO Box A2468, Sydney South, 1235, or by contacting:
